

GEORGIA'S CLEAN AIR FORCE PROVIDES ONLINE FOREIGN LANGUAGE ASSISTANCE

ATLANTA – January 4, 2011 – Georgia's Clean Air Force (GCAF) features an online foreign language assistance program in an effort to assist non-English speaking motorists with helpful information regarding the emission testing process. The enhanced foreign language assistance program includes select information in Spanish to reach metro Atlanta's growing Hispanic population, and also offers valuable assistance in Korean and Vietnamese.

This enhanced foreign language assistance located on GCAF's website provides details on GCAF's Enhanced Vehicle Inspection and Maintenance (I/M) Program, which provides non-English speaking motorists with an opportunity to research and find clear, concise program instructions. Educational information, including the importance of the I/M program and the health benefits associated with improving air quality, also are available in Spanish.

“This helpful tool assists us in communicating emission testing basics to the growing metro Atlanta community” said Public Affairs Coordinator Vicky Giles – Georgia Environmental Protection Division. “Providing this information in a user-friendly, multi-lingual format allows us to reach more people and move us toward our goal of helping Georgians breathe easier.”
